

‘Kentucky Life’ explores the Cove Haven Cemetery, Huntertown in Versailles, the work of musician Julia Perry with the Lexington Philharmonic, and a Louisville library branch that was first in the nation intended for African Americans

FOR RELEASE: Feb. 6, 2023

On this episode of Kentucky Life, host Chip Polston visits the Cove Haven Cemetery, which has served the Black community of Central Kentucky since 1907; explores the rich history of Huntertown, established in 1871 as an African American free town in Versailles; talks with musician Julia Perry and learns about her association with the Lexington Philharmonic; and stops in at the Western Branch of the Louisville Free Public Library system, which was the first library in the nation staffed by, and intended for, African Americans.
