Weather experts discuss ways to prepare for spring storm season on 'Severe Weather: Staying Safe'

FOR RELEASE: Feb. 10, 2023

Spring can be a dangerous season in Kentucky, with higher potential for tornadoes, severe storms, lightning and flooding.

To help viewers prepare, KET presents Severe Weather: Staying Safe, featuring a panel of weather experts to answer viewers' questions and offer advice on how to get ready for the storm season. Scheduled guests include:

- John Gordon, meteorologist-in-charge with Louisville National Weather Service
- Jeremy Slinker, director of Kentucky Division of Emergency Management
- Myra Shird, federal coordinating officer with Federal Emergency Management Agency
- Jerry Stacy, director of Perry County Emergency Management
