

‘Kentucky Life’ tells the story of Wade Houston of Louisville, a new cookbook by author Aimee Zaring; the nation’s first commercial winery, established in 1799 in Kentucky; and a mural that honors the African American community of Jonesville

FOR RELEASE: April 3, 2023

On this episode of Kentucky Life, host Chip Polston talks with Wade Houston, a Louisville businessman and former basketball coach at Male High School and the University of Louisville; visits with Aimee Zaring, who in a new cookbook explores the recipes and journeys of refugees living in Kentucky; retraces the history of the First Vineyard, the first commercial winery in the United States, established in 1799 by Kentucky state statute; and explores a Buon fresco mural that honors the once thriving African American community of Jonesville in Bowling Green.
