KET available on Local Now streaming service

FOR RELEASE: June 8, 2023

KET is now available on Local Now, a free streaming service that delivers local programming to more than 225 markets across the United States, including in Kentucky.

Beginning June 8, a livestream of KET's main channel will be offered on Local Now's lineup of more than 450 channels, which includes livestreams of local news, weather, sports, traffic and other programming options to help viewers stay connected to their communities. Local Now is available on the following platforms: Roku, iOS/TVOS, Android mobile/tablet and Android TV, the newest update of Fire TV.

"We're always interested in the latest media innovations and making KET accessible to our viewers," said Shae Hopkins, KET's executive director and CEO.

In addition to Local Now, livestreams of KET and KET PBSKIDS channel are available through YouTubeTV and DIRECTTV STREAM. They are also available through the PBS app via the following platforms: Roku, Apple TV, iOS, Chromecast, Amazon Fire TV, Android and Android TV. These channels as well as KET2, KET KY and World are available for livestreaming at KET.org.
