

New season of 'The Farmer & The Foodie' features tasty recipes with Kentucky ingredients, including maple syrup, wild mushrooms and artisanal cheeses

FOR RELEASE: Dec. 18, 2023

The Farmer & The Foodie, the KET series that explores Kentucky farms to discover local ingredients for scrumptious dishes and desserts, returns in January with all new episodes.

The new season, which premieres Saturday, Jan. 6, finds hosts Maggie Keith (the farmer) and Lindsey McClave (the foodie) harvesting maple syrup in Scottsville, foraging for wild mushrooms in Eastern Kentucky, picking a variety of homegrown strawberries in Whitesburg, making artisanal cheese in East Bernstadt, and learning about a community gardening and composting group in Lexington.

Each episode takes viewers behind-the-scenes with local farmers and makers to see first-hand how the food is made, and then Maggie and Lindsey take what they've learned into the kitchen to create a delicious dish.
