

‘Kentucky Health’ discusses federally qualified health centers that serve medically underserved areas and populations

FOR RELEASE: Feb. 11, 2024

Where do you go for healthcare when you have nowhere else to turn? For many, the answer is a federally qualified health center, which serve medically underserved areas and provide primary care services regardless of a person’s ability to pay.

On this episode of Kentucky Health, host Dr. Wayne Tuckson talks to Dr. Swannie Jett, CEO of Park DuValle Community Health Center in Louisville, about federally qualified health centers.
