

‘Kentucky Life’ explores a Lexington concert series, an organization that converts grasslands into productive forestland, visits with former residents of ‘Old Burnside,’ and checks out a Bowling Green theater camp for children with autism

FOR RELEASE: April 6, 2024

On this episode of Kentucky Life, host Chip Polston explores a Lexington music concert series for regional musicians; learns about Green Forests Work, which converts reclaimed, non-native grasslands into healthy, productive forestland; visits with former residents of “Old Burnside,” a former city located along the Cumberland River that was forced to relocate in the 1950s upon the arrival of the Wolf Creek Dam that created Lake Cumberland; and enjoys the work of a Bowling Green summer theater camp for children on the autism spectrum that staged a version of The Wizard of Oz.
