

In first episode of new season, ‘Kentucky Health’ discusses Parkinson’s disease

FOR RELEASE: Oct. 1, 2024

Kentucky Health, KET’s weekly program discussing advances in health and medicine in the Commonwealth, kicks off a new season of episodes this month.

The first episode looks at Parkinson’s disease, which has been associated in recent years with several high-profile celebrities who suffer from the affliction, including Michael J. Fox, major league baseball player Ben Petrick, and singer Ozzy Osborne.

Join Dr. Wayne Tuckson as he talks with neurologist Dr. Zain Guduru, an assistant professor of neurology with UK Healthcare, about Parkinson’s disease.
